Moshe Zalman Feiglin is an Israeli politician and columnist. A former member of Likud, he headed the Manhigut Yehudit (Jewish Leadership) faction within the party, and represented Likud in the Knesset between 2013 and 2015, serving as Deputy Speaker in the 19th Knesset.

In January 2015 he announced that he was leaving Likud to form his own party and shortly after the elections announced the new party was to be called, Zehut (Identity)

Feiglin is the author of the (Hebrew) books Where There Are No Men and War of Dreams. He has a column in both Ma'ariv & Makor Rishon daily newspapers and writes columns regularly for the Jewish Press. He also appears frequently on international TV and radio.

Moshe and his wife Tzippy live in Karnei Shomron, in the Shomron region and have five children and three grandchildren.
